

The Health Secretary has announced  to significantly increase coronavirus  in the UK. Matt Hancock, who has  returned from self-isolation after  the virus, said he hoped that 100,000 tests could be  out every day in England by the end of the month. Universities and  firms will be called in to help. After days of intense criticism, he  there had been big challenges with testing from the , with delays meaning previous  had not been . Today, it was announced that 569 more people have died from coronavirus in the past 24 hours,  the total number of confirmed reported  in the UK to 2,921. Here's our political editor Laura Kuenssberg. Will there be ? Not a pleasant process,  a vital one. This is , and I can only apologise for it. Because health workers are desperate to  if they have the virus, so they can be, if they can, where they  treating patients on the front line.